

背面二维码和环保回收标等边边距为8*8mm

Definition
A verb that describes the action of making something into a book or a book of a particular type.

Usage
The verb bind is used in two main senses. In the first sense, it means to make a book or a book of a particular type. For example, "The printer bound the book in leather." In the second sense, it means to make a book or a book of a particular type. For example, "The printer bound the book in leather."

Technical Information
The verb bind is a regular verb. It is formed by adding -ed to the base form. The past tense and past participle are both bound. The present participle is binding. The infinitive form is to bind.

Example Sentences
1. The printer bound the book in leather.
2. The printer bound the book in leather.
3. The printer bound the book in leather.
4. The printer bound the book in leather.
5. The printer bound the book in leather.
6. The printer bound the book in leather.
7. The printer bound the book in leather.
8. The printer bound the book in leather.
9. The printer bound the book in leather.
10. The printer bound the book in leather.

Related Words
The verb bind is related to the noun binding, which means the act of binding or the state of being bound. It is also related to the noun book, which means a written work.

Idioms
The verb bind is used in several idioms. For example, "to be bound by a promise" means to be committed to a promise. "to be bound by a contract" means to be committed to a contract. "to be bound by a law" means to be committed to a law.

Summary
The verb bind is a regular verb that means to make something into a book or a book of a particular type. It is formed by adding -ed to the base form. The past tense and past participle are both bound. The present participle is binding. The infinitive form is to bind. It is related to the noun binding and the noun book. It is used in several idioms.

[illegible]