Pursuant to the requirements contained in part 15.121 of commission's Rules, this RADIUS does not have the capability of turning the assigned to the Domestic Public Cellular Radio Telecommunications Service.

In this circuitry, this device is not readily alterable to restore the cellular band coverage because the inventory of frequencies contained within this band is not available in the microprocessor. Also, the microprocessor is fixed soldered and not easily removable.

In addition, the critical circuitry is "hardened" with a black epoxy that covers the area of the circuitry that might be modified to circumvent the design efforts reference above.

Therefore, since the clipping of leads; or the installation of a simple component such as a diode, resistor, or a jumper wire; or the reprogramming of any semiconductor device contained within this unit cannot be accomplished using a special access code or a personal computer; This is to certify that conditions mandated in part 15.121 have been met.
