

The image shows the back of a white Apple keyboard. The keyboard has a long, rectangular body with rounded ends. In the center, there is a recessed area where the keys are attached. On the right side, there is a small, rectangular label with technical specifications. Below the main keyboard body, there is a separate, smaller white component, which is the backlit keyboard unit, shown from its underside. The entire setup is placed on a dark blue surface.

