Is the agent for service of process required to have an FRN?

Is the agent for service of process required to have an FRN? If the agent for service of process does business with the FCC, it should have an FRN, and that FRN is required to be included on the attachment/certification letter designating the agent for service of process. If the agent for service of process does no business with the FCC other than being designated as an U.S agent for service of process, a separate FRN is not required; in such case, only the grantee's FRN is required to be included on the attachment/certification letter designating the U.S. agent for service of process.

If the applicant (grantee) is located in the U.S., can it be its own agent for service of process? Yes. If the applicant (grantee) chooses to be its own agent for service of process, the applicant (grantee) still must submit a certification, including the required contact information for the agent for service of process, designating itself and agreeing to accept service of process.

Can the written certification designating the agent for service of process include an expiration date?

No, the written certification designating the agent for service of process is not permitted to have an expiration date

What are the responsibilities of the agent for service of process?

An agent for service of process for the particular equipment certification authorization has the obligation to accept the service of process and other legal process documents on behalf of the grantee of the authorization (the responsible party) and to swiftly and dutifully deliver them to that party. Service of process includes, but is not limited to, delivery of any correspondence, notices, orders, decisions, and requirements of administrative, legal, or judicial process related to Commission proceedings. See FCC 22-84, paragraph 63. However, service of process on the grantee of the equipment authorization is deemed to be complete when the document is sent to the U.S. physical address, U.S. mailing address (if different), or e-mail address of the U.S.-based agent for service of process.
