1) Please update the user manual RF exposure statement. The location reference "is installed on the corner of the bottom of the LCD display." does not appear to agree with locations shown on the photograph. Mention of the blue tooth transmitter is not made. Also, please include an appropriate "no collocation" statement.

Response: Revised sections of the manual have been uploaded with the changes that were requested to be included. Changes were made to page 18 of 27.

2) per reply to crn 25758 #3:
certification status is needed for Bluetooth, i.e., is it modular approval and what is ID, is it part of the present application, etc. EMC testing and Form 731 line item may be needed.

Response: Per Acer, no bluetooth will be available or installed in US laptop models. If a signed letter from Acer is required please let me know.

3) per reply to crn 25758 #5:

Thank you for re-formatting the April letter to reflect the correct questions. It is noted that April date is Aug20, whereas previous April letter had Aug29 date.

Response: Your welcome. This was a typo on the date. Do we need to upload with recent date? I would think it is not necessary.

4) reply to crn 25758 #6-8 not found - repeated here:

Response: Uploaded Reply Label "CRN2578 SAR"

4a) per reply to crn 25598 #2, 15-page exhibit entitled "Approval Sheet, Wistron Corporation" shows antennas at top and bottom left of LCD - need SAR data.

Response: Uploaded Reply Label "CRN2578 SAR"

4b) per reply to crn 25598 #1 please provide the related probe certification that you mentioned.

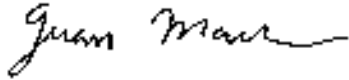

Response: Uploaded Reply Label "CRN2578 SAR"

4c) per reply to crn 25598 #5, please re-address. Your answer appears to address questions from the related 5 GHz filings. At 2.4 GHz use of head target with body liquid is unconventional. Please justify.

Response: Uploaded Reply Label “CRN2578 SAR”
