Dear FCC:

We are submitting a request for equipment authorization for our products with FCC ID S5R-3490, S5R-4940 and S5R-5580 (the "Products"). We, at Mosby LLC and our affiliates, need to make sure that some of the information and documents we submit with our applications are kept confidential. I explain more in this letter. We thank you for your help in keeping Mosby's information as confidential.

1. It is allowed under 47 CFR Section 0.457 and 47 CFR Section 0.459 and other FCC rules that we can keep certain information confidential forever. We ask that the following information/documents about each of the Products never be shared publicly by the FCC:

Block diagram
Operational manual/description (including for power reduction)
Schematics
Tune-up procedures

The reason we are asking is because these documents have very sensitive confidential information about our product's design. If someone got this information, they would know how we make our products work. We do not share this information with anyone even after we start to sell our products to our customers. We only share if we have an NDA or something like that to protect our company from someone sharing the information without our OK. We also only let people see or use these documents who must know this information to help us with our products.

Our product is going to be sold in the very tough, cutthroat mobile product market. It would hurt us very badly if one of our competitors were to get this secret information. If they did, they would get an unfair advantage over Mosby and our products. They would also be able to use all of our research & development and learning to get lots of really valuable information about how we design and make this product. We would not have access to the same type of information and that would be very unfair to our business.

2. It is allowed under the FCC's Public Notice of June 15, 2004 (DA 04-1705) that certain information can be kept confidential for a short time. We ask that the following information/documents about each of the Products be kept secret for 180 days:

- Internal photos
- External photos
- Bluetooth set-up photo
- WLAN set-up photos
- WWAN set-up photos
- DFS set-up photo
- SAR set-up photo
- User guide

The reason we are asking is because we do not share this type of information with anyone unless we have an NDA or something like it to protect our company from the information being shared with others. It would be very hurtful to our business and give our competitors an unfair advantage if this information was shared before we start selling our products.

Keeping this information confidential is very important to Mosby and our affiliates. If you have any concerns, please let me know so we can discuss.

Sincerest regards,

John Latham, President
Mosby LLC
